CEOs from Mental Health America and 14 top mental health organizations join together to prioritize response to nation's escalating mental health crisis

The chief executives of the nation's 14 leading mental health advocacy organizations and professional associations today announced the formation of a unified coalition with a common vision in response to the nation's mental health crisis.

"The CEOs of many of the major mental health organizations in the nation affirmed our collective commitment to the mental health of the nation and a reimagined system of care for people with mental illnesses," said Mental Health America's President and CEO Paul Gionfriddo. "This new system would be built from the needs of real people, not providers or advocates. And it focuses on prevention, early identification and intervention, integrated services, and recovery for all – for which MHA has been advocating for a century."

As more than half of all Americans struggle with their mental health due to the impact of COVID-19, the leadership group is a first-of-its-kind, solutions-focused collaboration among the top mental health organizations and their chief executives to address the crisis and offer state and regional officials a blueprint for systemic reform. The partnership effectively establishes and rallies a rarely seen solidarity in the mental health space. It speaks to the urgency of the mental health emergency, reminiscent of previous collaborations established to address major health crises, including cancer in the 1970s and the HIV/AIDS in the 1980s.

"The pandemic has focused the nation's attention on mental health and the inequities baked into our service delivery system," Gionfriddo said. "If implemented, the principles and strategies imbedded in this visioning document will address those inequities and ensure that no person – of any racial, ethnic, or cultural group – with a mental health condition is ever again treated as a second-class citizen, as a danger to themselves or others, or as someone whose unavoidable health condition is somehow their own fault."

The leadership coalition is comprised of CEOs from the American Psychological Association, the American Psychiatric Association, the Kennedy Forum, the Massachusetts Association for Mental Health, Meadows Mental Health Policy Institute, Mental Health America, the National Association for Behavioral Healthcare, the National Alliance on Mental Illness, the National Council for Behavioral Health, One Mind, Pegs Foundation, the Steinberg Institute, the Treatment Advocacy Center and Well Being Trust.

The leadership coalition's plan – titled A Unified Vision for Transforming Mental Health and Substance Abuse Care – calls for policy, programs and standards that prioritize mental health care and address the social and economic conditions – including racism and discrimination – that disproportionately impact people of color and the poor, and result in inadequate and inequitable access to effective, humane treatment.

And the coalition is calling on the nation's federal, state, and local public officials to respond.

"It will take the commitment of our nation's public officials to redirect the billions of dollars being wasted each year on incarceration and other failed systems of care to a public health model such as this," Gionfriddo concluded. "But these billions of dollars – now properly invested – will save countless lives and trillions of dollars in the years to come."

View the Vision Statement at <https://mhanational.org/sites/default/files/A%20Unified%20Vision%20for%20Transforming%20Mental%20Health%20and%20Substance%20Use%20Care.pdf>.

How to set and achieve goals

This time of year brings many new opportunities. Venturing outside of your comfort zone to create new goals could be something you are ready to take on. If so, there are five steps commonly known as the SMART process to help you get started on the path to success. As you determine what you want to accomplish in 2021, ask yourself these questions:

- 1. Is my goal specific? Your goal should be clearly defined, leaving no room for ambiguity. The narrower your goal, the more you'll understand the steps necessary to achieve it.
- 2. Is my goal measurable? Include precise amounts and dates when drafting your goal. The more details, the better. This will give you the opportunity to re-evaluate and course correct, as needed.
- 3. Is my goal attainable? Before you begin working toward a goal, decide whether it's something you can achieve now or whether there are additional preliminary steps you should take to become better prepared.
- 4. Is my goal relevant? Your goals should align with your values and larger, long-term goals. If a goal doesn't contribute toward your broader objectives, you may want to reconsider it.
- 5. Is my goal timely? Setting a time period for your goals will help you prioritize and provide motivation to keep you on track.

Here are some examples of goals that follow this process:

- My goal is to walk one mile, four times a week on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday for three months.
 - My goal is to read six books that I have not read before Dec. 31.
 - My goal is to workout at home for 30 minutes, three times a week on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday for six months.
 - My goal is to cook 12 new recipes with a family member or friend via FaceTime, Zoom or another platform.
- Let us know what your goals are by adding the hashtag #NewYearNewYou to your New Year's resolutions on social media.

Some of the most common New Year's resolutions include exercising more, eating healthier, losing weight, saving money and quitting smoking. Self-care and mental health goals are also great to include, such as reducing stress, starting a new hobby, learning a new skill, getting more quality sleep or focusing on personal growth.

Many things have changed due to the COVID-19 pandemic, so think out of the box when working towards achieving you goals. For example, if your gym is closed or you do not feel comfortable attending, try exercising at home or outdoors. There are many health benefits to being outdoors, so if the weather allows work on your goals outdoors.

The main thing is to stick with it. If you hit a bump in the road, don't quit! This is normal. Get back on course and step by step you will reach your goals.

NFL needs more leaders like Vincent

Jarrett Bell
Columnist
USA TODAY

TAMPA, Fla. — Sometimes, I'd swear Troy Vincent has been cloned. The NFL's executive vice president of football operations has his fingerprints all over the place when it comes to the league's wide range of issues, strategies, ventures and the primary product itself, the game.

Never mind the official title. His job description, which includes oversight of the officiating department and the nuts and bolts of game operations, merely scratches the surface.

But let's start with Vincent's chief role. It has been challenging enough with so many added layers as the league pulled off its ambitious goal of playing a complete season (sans the preseason and the Pro Bowl) during a pandemic that culminates with Super Bowl 55.

"It's the power of teamwork," he told USA TODAY. "I've always believed in it. There's power when people come together for a common cause. In this case, if everyone is not aligned — the players, the medical experts, the NFLPA (National Football League Players Association), the teams — then you don't have even a remote chance of any success."

Vincent, 50, reflected from the NFL's headquarters hotel adjacent to Tampa Convention Center after returning from a walk-through for a Tuesday event at Just Elementary School, less than two miles from Raymond James Stadium. Interestingly, the community service project isn't among the many league-sanctioned activities common during Super Bowl week (and even this week, as COVID-19 has ushered in a severely scaled-back Super Bowl environment).

Vincent's family foundation, Love Thy Neighbor, has for years adopted a school in the Super Bowl city to support. Troy and his wife, Tommi, and their 15-year-old twins (three other children are adults) were at the school with several others Monday working through details for the donated technology equipment that the STEM school lacked.

"We're trying to bridge the educational gap," Vincent said.

This tells you something else about Vincent, who grew up in Trenton, New Jersey, and played 16 seasons as an NFL defensive back. For all of his NFL work, there's another track. He and Tommi, married for 26 years, also adopted schools in cities that have hosted the draft. Then there are vacations, which in the NFL universe typically begins in late June and extends into July before camps open. Vacations over several non-pandemic years for the Vincents have usually been built around the weeklong tours of Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) arranged for underprivileged children.

A few years ago, I reached out to Vincent on a weekend. He said he'd get back to me after he finished up with the kids. Again, he wasn't referring to his kids. He has a mentoring program for high school football players that he conducts on Saturdays in Baltimore, which includes on and off-the-field tutoring. Asked this week if he had to scrap the program during the pandemic, he said, "No, we just had to scale it back."

Troy Vincent is the NFL executive vice president of football operations but his contributions extend well beyond the job title and work hours. BRYNN ANDERSON/AP

Let Derrick Brooks, the former Buccaneers Hall of Fame linebacker, put the essence of Vincent into context. "Since I've known Troy, you've always seen his love for serving," Brooks said, alluding to Vincent's Christian values. "It's apparent. It starts with his faith. He and Tommi are very in tune with what it means to lead by faith."

Brooks, enlisted as an appeals officer in a position jointly arranged by the league and NFLPA that addresses on-field discipline, went on to rave about the impact Vincent had in improving services provided by the league for retired NFL players. That flowed out of Vincent's previous position at league headquarters, where he overhauled the Player Engagement Department.

Others point to Vincent's key role in diversity and inclusion initiatives as a defining measure. The issue, which most notably focus on opportunities for minority coaches and executives, has gained increasing attention as one hiring cycle after another have frustrated minority coaches and other proponents for equality. And no league executive has provided a stronger voice on the issue than Vincent, the league's highest-ranking Black executive.

In December, Vincent drew headlines — and some brushback criticism — for his scathing rebuke of the hiring practices of not only the NFL teams that pay his salary but also the sports industry at large as he bemoaned the minimal opportunities provided to minorities. It was so rare, yet unapologetically refreshing, for a high-ranking league executive to speak with such passion to an issue that resonates for a significant portion of, well, the NFL's fan base. This, of course, coincides with his tireless efforts behind the scenes, with include working closely with Commissioner Roger Goodell, the league's diversity committee and the Fritz Pollard Alliance, which promotes minority hiring.

"It's our issue," Vincent said. "It's not the issue of the commissioner, or people of color, or women. It's our issue. For us to dance around it, no! This is a problem. This is not about shaming anyone, because I have to work with individuals to make progress. I was just trying to state truth and where we all should be heading and why — because it's the right thing to do."

Later in December, the league conducted a two-day virtual seminar for HBCU students interested in seeking non-playing careers in the sports industry. Of course, Vincent had a key role in the program that included speakers from teams and the league. And of course Vincent, who also played a role in connecting the league and its in-house media operation to the National Association of Black Journalists (NABJ) to create an internship program, sounded a bit embarrassed when asked about it.

"It's just being a connector and a facilitator," Vincent said. "Lead from behind. Get the right people to the table."

He knows. The lack of opportunity for coaches is part of a larger picture reflected throughout the NFL on many fronts ... as in society at large.

"When you see the lack of respect, lack of acknowledgment of disenfranchised people, we have (HBCU) institutions that produce the best and the brightest people of color in all areas. Looking for talented people? They're right over here. They're not just at predominantly white institutions."

David Cornwell, the sports attorney who in the 1980s worked at NFL headquarters and established the first minority coaches fellowship among other initiatives, can relate well to Vincent. Cornwell knows the landscape, the battles and the politics. He also believes that Vincent's background — toward the end of his playing career he became president of the NFLPA and was once considered a possible successor to late union chief Gene Upshaw — makes him uniquely qualified for his wide-ranging role as arguably Goodell's most valuable lieutenant.

"The key ingredient is what he brings to it with his authenticity as a person," Cornwell said. "He was a great player, but he's turned out to be a remarkable man, husband and father, too, with a tireless commitment to the NFL."

Cornwell brings up an adage when considering Vincent: The reward for being responsible is more responsibility.

"His approach to politics is to be effective," Cornwell said. "In some organizations, performance is never an issue unless it's not there."

Which brings us back to the chief role. Vincent has also been the liaison — and enforcer in sticky cases that in-involved outbreaks with the Titans and Ravens, plus compliance issues with the Broncos and Raiders, and the relocation of the 49ers to Arizona for several weeks — in dealing with the teams and the pandemic. It was not always smooth, yet at various stages of the season Vincent would quickly recite the number of contests played as context for the goal of playing 256 regular-season games before the playoffs.

"We had to have constant communication and be flexible on our end as well," Vincent said, which only begins to address the league's challenge.

Without a pandemic, there likely would have been more attention this season of the overhaul of the league's officiating department. Al Riveron's role as the director was reduced, split up with former referee Walt Anderson, and former coach Perry Fewell enlisted to help lead the department.

"People are not talking about officiating," Vincent said, meaning that controversies have been at a minimum — although, well, there is one pretty high-profile game left.

Despite Vincent's contention, people have talked about officiating this season — for progressive reasons.

Sarah Thomas on Sunday will become the first woman to officiate a Super Bowl, working as the down judge. It's historic, but Vincent insists that it wasn't a designed social progress move. Thomas has drawn four postseason assignments in six years with the league.

"She earned it," Vincent said. "You can't get to this game without being ranked in the top three at your position. What I'm hoping to get from that, just like Week 11 and Week 17, is to normalize it. It should not be an outlier in 2021."

In Week 11, as Vincent noted, the NFL used an all-Black officiating crew for the first time, to much fanfare. Another all-Black crew worked the Washington-Philadelphia finale, too, with so little attention that it was barely noticed.

Over the years, Vincent also helped establish the "Broadcast Boot Camp" that has helped players transition to TV jobs. The annual Gospel Celebration? He was a supporter of that event (now in Year 22) from way back, too, helping to fuel involvement of current and former players. With personal experiences from his childhood, he has been an internal resource on domestic violence issues. And in recent years, he has been intimately involved in the league efforts — albeit some of which have been open to criticism dating to Colin Kaepernick's protests during the national anthem — in social justice matters.

If there are not more Troy Vincents, there need to be.

"I believe, over time, I've gained the trust of the commissioner and others, to be able to lend an opinion or a point of view on topics that have not fallen in the job description, i.e. social justice matters," Vincent said. "That lives with someone else, but I've been on the forefront with people doing it day to day, without stepping on people's toes."

But still, the energy has to come from somewhere.

"I don't have a choice. I just happen to be in the race with the baton in my hand. I am inspired on a daily basis because I see the difference we can make."

In other words, Vincent no longer plays the game. But he's more of an impact player than ever.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

March Madness just around corner

Looking for your 2021 Cinderella? Start with two schools from Missouri Valley

Scott Gleeson
USA TODAY

The NCAA Tournament is just around the corner, and once it tips off the small midmajor schools that often become March Madness darlings will be on full display.

While this season has been far from smooth – the pandemic has forced the cancellation or postponement of games and some teams have had trouble finding their rhythm – there are obvious leaders in the clubhouse in this category.

Some are familiar names – take Loyola-Chicago, for example. The Ramblers and Sister Jean advanced to the Final Four three years ago. Drake, off to its best start, hasn't qualified for the tournament since 2008.

Five teams poised to wear a glass slipper as a potential Cinderella in the 2021 NCAA Tournament:

Drake

The Bulldogs (18-1) just suffered their first loss Sunday, to Valparaiso, but have built up a solid tournament resume. It's likely they could land an at-large bid in the NCAA Tournament out of the Missouri Valley.

Regardless of seeding line, whichever team draws Drake in March Madness will be in trouble. The Bulldogs shoot over 50% from the floor with a dynamic offense that overshadows a top-20 defense. ShanQuan Hemphill (14.4 points per game) has the skill set to be a March star.

Belmont, which won the Ohio Valley Conference in 2019-20, is a midmajor team that could make noise in this year's NCAA Tournament. DANIEL R. PATMORE/AP

Loyola-Chicago

As Drake has hogged the top 25 spotlight in the MVC thanks to its strong start, fellow MVC kingpin Loyola (17-3) has been overshadowed. In 2018, coach Porter Moser took the Ramblers to the Final Four. This group isn't as special as that remarkable team, but the same winning recipe has been coming to fruition of late.

Loyola has won 10 in a row and has been pummeling opponents: a 42-point win over Northern Iowa on Jan. 17 and a 36-point victory over Valparaiso on Jan. 20 are just two examples.

Belmont

The Bruins (20-1) haven't lost a game since Dec. 5. Coach Casey Alexander has continued to keep this midmajor a force in the Ohio Valley since legendary coach Rick Byrd retired in 2019. Belmont has a well-balanced offense that is the sum of its parts, with five players averaging double figures starting with veteran big man Nick Muszynski (15.1 ppg).

BYU

The Cougars (15-5) held their own against No. 1 Gonzaga on Monday in an 11-point loss and have a strong enough tournament portfolio to land a No. 7 to No. 9 seed – staying off the bubble. Senior Alex Barcello (15.4 ppg, 4.6 assists per game) is a do-everything guard who could rise as a March star. BYU averages about nine 3-pointers per game.

Winthrop

The Eagles (16-1) also just got their first loss of the season, to UNC-Asheville. Chandler Vaudrin does it all for Winthrop, leading the team in points, rebounds, assists and steals. This team will need to prevail in the Big South to secure an automatic bid, but if it earns its ticket this group could surprise power conference teams with its efficiency.

Five teams have exceeded early expectations

Scott Gleeson
USA TODAY

Expecting the unexpected is a common theme for March Madness. Here in February we can look back on the preseason Top 25 and see how some of the predictions were way off (ahem, Kentucky ... ahem, Duke ... ahem, Kansas).

There are always a handful of teams that far exceed expectations and arise as a dark horse heading into the pivotal home stretch. Here's a look at them.

Ohio State: Starting the season at No. 24, the Buckeyes (16-4) were expected to be decent but hardly a top five team – where they find themselves in this week's Ferris Mowers Coaches Poll.

Ohio State has won five in a row in arguably the country's toughest conference, the Big Ten. The team's defeat of Iowa last week poses the argument for the Buckeyes to be worthy of a possible No. 1 seed should the currently projected top seeds falter.

Alabama: Nate Oats is in the running for national coach of the year for the job he's done with the Crimson Tide (16-5). Alabama was No. 25 in the preseason poll. The program has exceeded expectations in the Southeastern Conference with an 11-1 league record and is in line to earn a No. 2 seed in the tournament.

One thing this squad does well is shoot from beyond the arc, ranking 10th nationally with 10.6 made 3-pointers per game.

Missouri: Coach Cuonzo Martin's team has been a major surprise with key defeats of Illinois, Oregon, Tennessee and, most recently, Alabama. The Tigers (13-3) are positioned to secure a No. 3 or No. 4 seed in the tournament based on that profile.

Guard Duane Washington Jr. has helped Ohio State to a 16-4 record. TOMMY GILLIGAN/USA TODAY SPORTS

Xavier Pinson and Dru Smith make up one of the most lethal backcourts in the country.

Oklahoma: Texas' exceptional start overshadowed just how good Lon Kruger's team has been in the Big 12. The Sooners (12-5) own wins over West Virginia, Texas, Kansas and Alabama.

Veteran guard Austin Reaves leads the team in points, rebounds and assists.

Virginia Tech: The Hokies (14-4) have significant wins over Villanova, Virginia and Clemson while staying in the Atlantic Coast Conference title race.

They weren't considered to be contenders (picked to finish 11th in the league) in November but have used a sound defense (ranking in the Top 40 of KenPom efficiency) and balanced offense (six players averaging nine points or more) to be positioned for a top-four seed.

Five must-watch players include No. 1 Gonzaga's senior wing Corey Kispert

Scott Gleeson
USA TODAY

Luka Garza, Iowa: A preseason national player of the year candidate following a remarkable junior campaign, the 6-foot-11 big man continues to deliver – averaging 25.5 points and 8.4 rebounds per game as the centerpiece to a Final Four-capable Iowa squad made up of hot-shooting guards who support Garza.

Cade Cunningham, Oklahoma State: The projected No. 1 pick in June's NBA draft, the 6-8 guard has been electric this season while elevating the Cowboys into the NCAA Tournament equation. Cunningham's averages – 18.7 points per game, 6.3 rebounds, 3.4 assists – are nice, but it's his ability to perform in the clutch that makes him a star who will be in the spotlight come March.

Cunningham's step-back three-pointer in a Feb. 6 double-overtime win over Texas and his game-winner on Dec. 12 versus Wichita State are two examples of his ability to come up big in crunchtime situations.

Hunter Dickinson, Michigan: Outside of Cunningham, one could make a case for an All-American first team made up of Big Ten players. The league has been that good.

Dickinson is the go-to player on the conference's best team.

The 7-1 freshman has averaged 15.1 points per game and 7.2 rebounds per game for the Wolverines (13-1) with the team well positioned to garner a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament.

Ayo Dosunmu, Illinois: A preseason first-team All-American, Dosunmu has been living up to the hype and then some by averaging 21.2 points and 5.1 assists for the Illini (13-5).

Oklahoma State's Cade Cunningham is averaging 18.7 points per game this season. MITCH ALCALA/AP

In a Feb. 6 win over Wisconsin, the junior guard had a triple-double – just the third in Illini history – with 21 points, 12 assists and 12 rebounds.

Corey Kispert, Gonzaga: The 6-7 senior wing has added leadership and experience to one of coach Mark Few's most well-rounded rosters in his Bulldogs tenure.

Kispert is averaging 19.5 points while shooting 57% from the floor for the undefeated Bulldogs, ranked first in the Ferris Mowers Coaches Poll.

BID OPENING will be held in the Community Auditorium located at 1915 Main Street, Forest Grove, OR 97116, on Thursday, February 25, 2021 at 2:00 pm, in order to maintain adequate social distancing requirements.

Scheduled Tour:

If you are unable to attend the tour, please call Scott Ferguson at 503.539.9939 to arrange a time to see the sale area.

Project Description:

To harvest all of the merchantable timber designated and to be marked on Douglas-fir stands of 125 total acres, standing and being upon those certain lands known as the Forest Grove Watershed, portions of Sections 24 and 25, Township 1N, Range 5W and Section 19, Township 1N, Range 4W, Washington County, State of Oregon. See the stand harvest information below and the attached map for more details. Trees are to be harvested May through September, 2021 as weather permits. The harvest is expected to yield approximately 1,875 MBF Douglas-fir.

17 acres of the harvest area will be patch-cut to remove most of the merchantable volume. 75 acres of 75+ year-old stands will be heavily thinned to promote stand diversity. The remaining 33 acres of 55-year-old stands will be lightly thinned to promote forest health. Most of the terrain is favorable for ground-based logging. Cable yarding will be necessary on 34 acres of the older stands that will be heavily thinned.

Stand Numbers; Treatment; Acres; Average Age; Avg. Stand Vol/Acre; Logging Type; Harvest Vol/Acre; Total Volume

- 1, 7, 8 and 10; Patch-cut; 17; 80; 38 M; Ground; 34 M; 570 M
- 5, 9 and 11; Heavy variable thin; 41; 80+; 40 M; Ground; 13 M; 530 M
- 6; Heavy variable thin; 34; 75; 35 M; Cable; 15 M; 510 M
- 2, 3 and 4; Light thin; 33; 55; 27 M; Ground; 8 M; 265 M

105 Acres; Total Volume 1,875 M Harvest Prescriptions:

Patch-Cuts: A total of 17 acres will be cut in four (4) separate patches. Approximately 10% of the original stands will be retained. All retention trees will be marked with an "L" in blue paint. Patch-cut borders are marked with blue and pink flagging.

Heavy Variable Thinning: 75 acres of the older Douglas-fir stands will be thinned to open up the canopy and promote natural fire regeneration and the establishment of a second age class. The method is to remove small patches of trees or individual trees in an irregular pattern. Trees will be selected from all size classes and will be marked with a horizontal band of blue paint. Approximately one third of the volume of the stand will be harvested.

Light Thinning: 33 acres of the younger, 55-year-old stands will be thinned to promote stand health and growth. Trees will be removed from the smaller size classes to favor the larger, healthier trees.

Logging System:

Most of this harvest is on terrain suitable for ground-based logging, with the exception of 34 acres of heavy variable thinning that will require cable yarding (see the detailed harvest layout map). The emphasis will be on quality logging and keeping stand impacts to a minimum. Forwarding distances to roads and landings are generally less than 800 feet on the ground-logging areas, and less than 1,500 feet in the cable logging area. Douglas-fir poles will be manufactured if the market is favorable.

Timber Cutting:

All trees will be bucked and limbed in the woods. There will be no machine processing at the landings.

Poles:

To provide incentive for the merchandizing of poles, the logger will be paid an extra $60 per MBF (above the sawlog rate) for the volume graded as 65 to 120-foot poles by the buyer. The logger will be paid an extra $30 per MBF (above the sawlog rate) for the graded volume of poles less than 65 feet long.

Markets and Log Merchandizing:

Most of this harvest will likely be cut into sawlog lengths. The average truck volume is expected to be approximately 5,000 board feet for the older stands, and 4,200 to 4,400 board feet for the younger stands, based on results from similar harvests in the watershed. Trees harvested in the older stands will have an estimated average DBH (diameter at breast height) of 20 to 24 inches.

Road Work:

Existing rocky roads provide good access.

Site Preparation:

Patch cut areas may require light site preparation (brush and slash piling). This work will be paid on an hourly machine rate basis (not included in logging rate).

Timing of Operations:

Work may commence as soon as the weather permits, and must finish by September 30, 2021.

RFP Submittal Due Date/Time: 5:00 p.m. MST, March 5, 2021

Request for Proposals The primary goals and deliverables: Provide information about possible proposed projects, preliminary or additional donor prospects and recommendations necessary to prepare and carry out a Major Gift Campaign for a Nursing & Allied Health Professions Center.

Develop a "Campaign Case for Support," to be presented to potential donors and interviewees participating in the Study. The Case will present the compelling need, the outcomes, a breakdown of the estimated program/project costs and its corresponding funding goals. An expanded version of this Case will also serve as the basis for grant proposals to leverage corporation and foundation giving.

Develop an initial prospect list of individuals, corporations and foundations who have the capacity to provide significant support for the campaign ($25,000 and above). These identified individuals, corporation and foundation leaders will be invited to participate in the planning process through confidential interviews, to engage their feedback on proposed plans and assess their willingness to support the campaign through a financial commitment and leadership involvement.

Based on interview outcomes, assess the likelihood of success, with a recommendation for both a working and an aspirational goal, and potential phasing of the project.

Draft and present a written Campaign Feasibility Study Report that specifically summarizes the following:

- An Executive Summary of key findings, conclusions and recommendations;
Recommendation of a realistic campaign goal;
Recommended revisions to the campaign's case for support/prospectus, based upon feedback from study interviews;

Recommendations and action timeline to guide the project leadership team, campaign leadership and staff through a "quiet phase" to full campaign completion;
An overview of the volunteer, staffing and consulting structure needed to support a successful campaign, with a corresponding campaign budget.

A committee from the college will evaluate the submitted RFP's and will select firms to interview. Published Feb. 10 & 12, 2021. 11966334
